Nation's Top Matmen Gird for NCAA Meet

By TOM PERRY
Assistant Sports Editor

NEW LONDON — By the time the Whaling City goes to sleep for the night Friday, 80 of the best small college wrestlers in the nation will have been culled from a field of 301 and will have gained All-America status.

But that will only be half the uphill climb for the wrestlers at the NCAA Division III National Wrestling Championships because on Saturday, the 80 All-Americans will be squaring off for national titles at the Roland Field House Gymnasium on the United States Coast Guard Academy campus.

Trenton State College, Millersville State, John Carroll and Humboldt College are among the squads favored to claim the team crown in the first NCAA championship wrestling tournament to be held in New England since 1931.

The last time a national wrestling tournament was held in the six-state region was 31 when Brown University in Providence hosted the NCAA Division I Tournament, which was the only national tournament held at that time.

The NCAA Division III Tournament was first held in 1974 in Wilkes, Pa. This year's tournament was originally scheduled for the Massachusetts Maritime Academy in Buzzards Bay on Cape Cod, but a shake-up in the athletic department at that school prompted the withdrawal of Mass. Maritime's bid for the affair.

By winning the bid for this year's tournament, the Coast Guard Academy becomes the first United States military institution to ever host a national wrestling tournament.

When wrestling begins on the eight mats that will be set up on the floor of Roland Field House's fifth level (the indoor track) one of the
